DRIVING CHANGE.

Blumont improves on 18 years of proven experience as International Relief & Development (IRD) to forge an enhanced development capability that is more locally focused, highly trained and empowered with advanced technology, tools and information resources to implement highly effective programs in the most difficult environments.

Key programs include an initiative providing direct relief to more than a million Syrian refugees and IDPs. Blumont is playing a central role in the construction and ongoing operations of the Zaatari Camp in Jordan, establishing the critically needed shelter and associated infrastructure as well as sustained food and non-food item support.

In West Africa, we continue to implement a vital program across the Sahel region focused on engaging youth activists and community leaders in grass roots programming designed to build dialogue and counter the rise of violent extremism.

The Kandahar Food Zone project identifies and addresses the drivers of poppy cultivation in seven targeted districts of that region of Afghanistan. This vital initiative includes improving community infrastructure, strengthening alternative livelihoods and supporting small businesses.

Delivering high-impact programs that empower communities in some of the world's most challenging environments.
